CLASS & FINAL EXAM CANCELLATION NOTICE

Due to some unexpected personal matters, I will be unable to attend our final class meeting on Thursday, May 16. Because of that, the final exam is being cancelled - there will be no class meeting on Thursday or during Finals Week for us, and no replacement exam will be given. This means that the term is effectively over for our class.

Your course grade will be determined just as it would have been had you taken a final exam: from your existing homework and essay work that is either already graded or in the process of being graded (in the case of your comparative essays and any outstanding revisions you've submitted to me). If you want to know what your course grade will be you should be checking the grade book in WebAccess periodically through next week as I complete my evaluations of your work and enter those marks. Final course grades will be officially made available in WebSmart on June 4.

Remember that you may still submit a typed version of your midterm revision to me through next Friday the 24th. You may also email me if you wish a copy of your extra credit outline originally due to be collected in class on Thursday and I'll give you credit for that as well.

If you need further clarification or reassurance on any of this please email me - I'll try to answer your questions as best I can, of course.

I'm sorry I won't be there to bid you all a semester well done and a happy summer to everyone. I actually enjoyed our class very much this term and that was largely because of who you are as individuals and what you all chose to bring to the class each night we met. And very nice work this term too, all of you - particularly during this last unit we've spent with Elie Wiesel's novel. You've all come quite a long way this term, producing excellent reading and writing work in the process, and should rightly be proud of the distance you've traveled and the confidence in your own skills you've each gained. You should feel quite well prepared to move forward in your academic goals.

Have a great summer everyone.
